FRAUD AWARENESS

Online Fraud: Mobile Money

Protect your money. Protect your PIN.

What is mobile money fraud?

Any trick that gets you to send money or reveal your PIN or code to someone who should never have it.

It usually arrives as a call, SMS, WhatsApp message or link.

The fraudster relies on you taking the action, not on hacking.

Why fraudsters target mobile money

01

It's instant

Money moves in seconds, often before you realise something is wrong.

02

It's hard to reverse

Once cashed out, stolen funds are rarely recovered.

03

It runs on trust

Scammers pose as agents, relatives, banks or officials.

Six common scams

"Wrong transfer"

"I sent money to you by mistake, please send it back."

Fake prizes

"You've won! Pay a small fee to claim your reward."

Fake customer care

Callers posing as your provider asking for your PIN.

SIM swap

Criminals take over your number to reach your wallet.

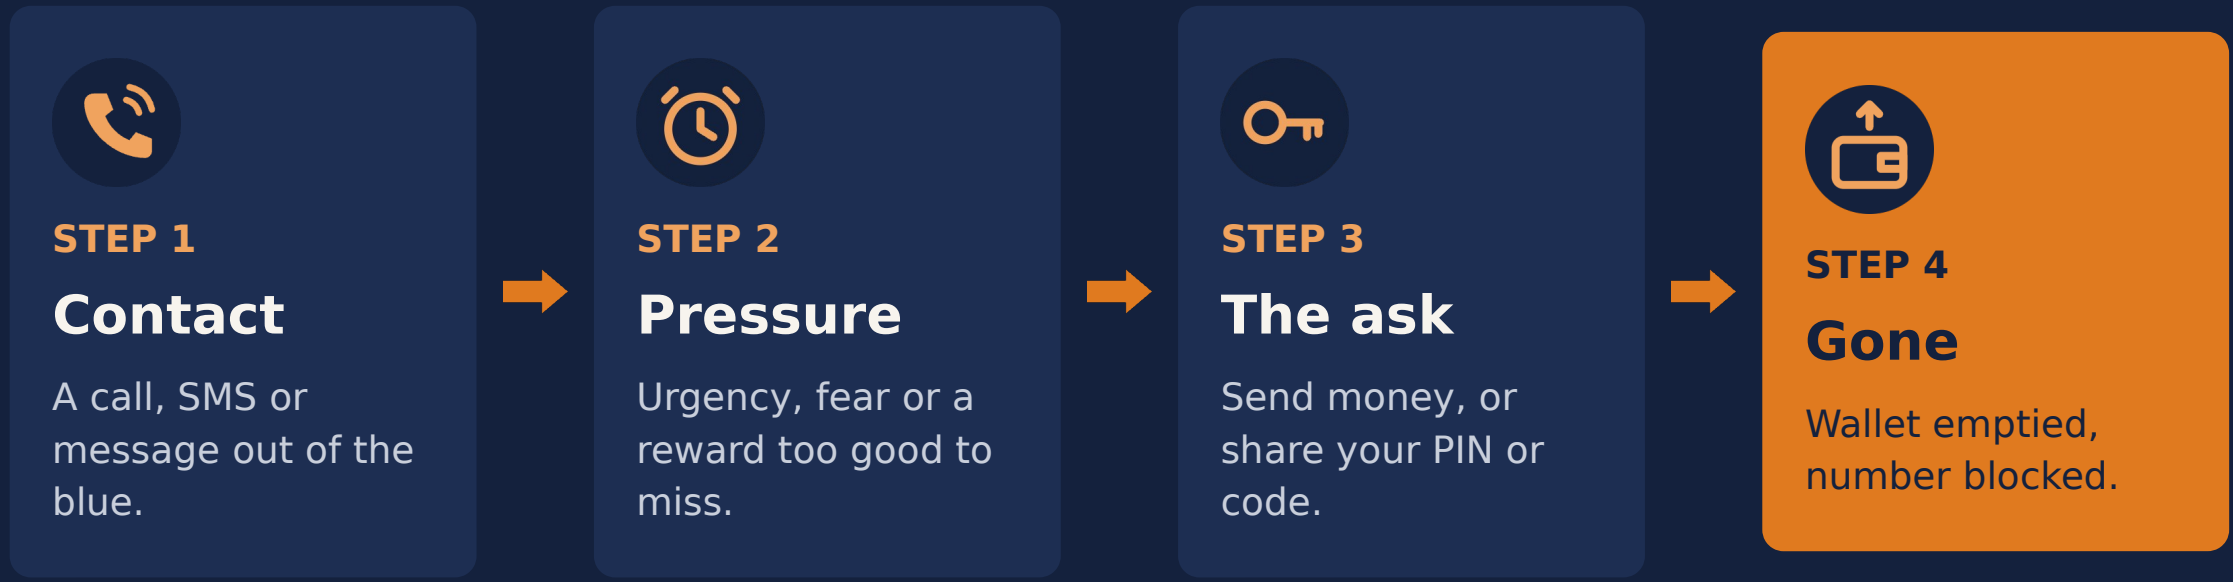

Phishing links

Fake websites or apps that steal your login details.

Loan & investment

Promises of quick loans or huge returns after a "fee".

How a typical scam unfolds

Break the chain at any step: hang up, wait, and verify through official channels.

Red flags to watch for

- [icon: alert-triangle] Anyone asking for your PIN or OTP
- [icon: alert-triangle] "Act now or your account is blocked"
- [icon: alert-triangle] Paying a fee to receive a prize or loan
- [icon: alert-triangle] Messages from personal numbers claiming to be official
- [icon: alert-triangle] Links asking you to log in or verify
- [icon: alert-triangle] A deposit SMS your balance doesn't show

THE GOLDEN RULE

Never share your PIN or OTP.

Not with "customer care". Not with an agent. Not with family.

Six habits that protect you

Keep your PIN secret

Cover the keypad; avoid birth years.

Check your balance

Confirm deposits in the app, not by SMS.

Call back officially

Hang up and dial the official number.

Use official apps

Only trusted app stores, no unknown links.

Lock your phone

Use a screen lock and wallet security.

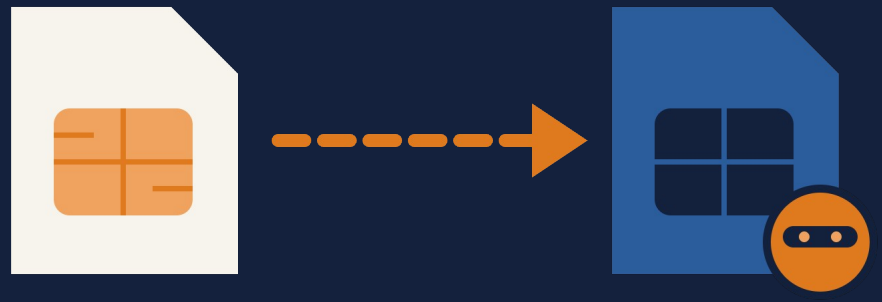

Talk about it

Warn family, especially older relatives.

SPOTLIGHT

SIM swap fraud

A criminal convinces your mobile operator to move your number to their SIM card. Your calls, SMS codes and mobile money now go to them.

Warning signs

- Your phone suddenly shows No Service
- You stop receiving calls or SMS
- Alerts about a SIM change you didn't request

Contact your operator immediately from another phone.

Scammed? Act fast

1. Call your provider immediately to report and try to block the transaction.
2. Change your PIN and secure your SIM and phone.
3. Keep the evidence: screenshots, numbers, messages and transaction IDs.
4. Report to the police or cybercrime unit.
5. Warn your contacts in case the scammer targets them next.

Stop. Think. Verify.

If it feels urgent, too good to be true, or asks for your PIN, it's a scam.

Thank you!
